So Long, Old Fella

OLD FELLA, a once-stray dog that inspired Good Sam Club members to support the cause of homeless canines, succumbed to cancer recently, but his legacy thrives online.

Old Fella first came to the attention of RVers when Richard Daniels wrote a post on the Good Sam Club forums describing his encounter with the skinny black dog at a campground. The enthusiastic response by fellow RVers encouraged Richard to adopt the dog and then start up the Old Fella Shelter in Waynesboro, Georgia.

Eventually, the forum's Old Fella thread became a rallying point for members eager to rescue stray animals. Last year, thread participants transported Ana-a dog that lost a leg in a roadside accident—from Georgia to her new home in Spanaway, Washington, by passing the pooch from RV to RV in a journey that was reported on NBC Nightly News.

The Old Fella thread now has more than 11,000 posts. You can read the latest animal-adoption news by visiting the forums and clicking on the Old Fella thread.
